ROUSING REPUBLICAN RALLY.

Congressman Horr Speaks to the Largest Audience Ever Assembled in the City.

Great Enthusiasm Aroused by the Hot Speech Scattered by the Eloquent Speaker.

The Meeting Preceded by a Big Torch Light Procession and Parade.

An Eloquent Appeal to the American People.

Hundreds of People, Loyal Men, Women and Children Turn out at the Ratification Meeting—An Attempt to Break up the Meeting by the Cry of "Fire" Proves Fruitless.

Brainerd has never seen such a demonstration as was witnessed on Tuesday evening last. The people of Brainerd and Crow Wing county have discovered that the distinguished descendant of old Tippecanoe, of all the candidates whose names were presented at the Chicago convention, was their choice for president. From the day on which he was nominated up to the present time the enthusiasm has steadily increased and it culminated in the demonstration of Tuesday evening. It was the first big run of the season for Brainerd and even the elements smiled on the affair. Thousands of men, women and children on the streets, with waving flags and bands of music were some of the outward signs of jubilee. For some days the committee had been laboring to complete the arrangements. Incoming trains brought people from Verndale, where their suburban band, Wadena, Motley, Gull River, Little Falls, Fort Ripley, Aitkin and other neighboring towns. Long before the meeting the mammoth opera house was filled to overflowing and the spectacle was an impressive one, a veritable sea of faces. The stage was draped in the national colors and over it a glorious canopy of stars and stripes, and the effect was like several Fourth of July thrown together.

THE PROCESSION.
One of the notable features of the demonstration was the splendid procession which formed in front of Sleeper block, in which the Republican headquarters are located, at 8:15 p. m. The Verndale band of eighteen pieces headed the column, directly behind them came the Brainerd band. Immediately following the bands came the Harrison and Morton marching club in new uniforms with torches and in the rear a hundred loyal Republicans who were unable to procure uniforms in time to fall in with the marching club. Numerous troupes of Republicans with mottoes indicative of Republican triumph this fall were also a feature. Sidewalks, streets, windows and house-tops were covered with spectators and cheers greeted them at every turn.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE.
At 9 o'clock the vanguard of the procession entered the opera house to the cheering music from the band. Suspended from the stage was a large portrait of Benjamin Harrison in full view of the audience, and with all truth it can be said that he was the most distinguished guest of the evening. On the stage were the Hon. R. G. Horr, Capt. C. L. Spaulding, Judge Fleming, J. J. Howe and others. Mr. Spaulding, president of the Republican club, finally arose and in fitting terms opened the meeting. After alluding to the importance of the present campaign, and the signs of victory that pervaded the very air, he introduced the speaker of the evening, the Hon. Roswell G. Horr. The cheering was deafening as Mr. Horr stepped to the front of the platform. His speech in substance was as follows:

A man would be peculiarly constituted who would be unmoved by a greeting like this. I expected a fair turnout to tell you the truth. I have been a Republican so long I could not tell anything else. I was a delegate to the Republican convention at Chicago. I would like to have nominated a soldier of my state. The convention overruled me, but just as good a soldier was nominated after all. There were many things done at that convention which Americans may be proud of. For one thing, they sent a message to that great chieftain who has just fought the greatest battle of his life since the one he fought when he made that famous ride to Winchester. Another thing was to send congratulations to the great nation of Brazil, which had just abolished slavery. And so was liberated the last slave on American soil. It is good to belong to a party that always stands up for liberty. Did anyone notice the message of our present president to the nation of Brazil? He said he hoped they would find the future would bear them out in what they had done. [Laughter.] Another thing that was said in that platform was in favor of the freedom of the ballot box. In several localities of this country they have tried to thwart the will of the people. They tried it in Cincinnati, and several Democrats were sent to the penitentiary. They tried it in Chicago and several more Democrats were sent up. Strange that it is always the Democrats that do this.

The next question was the great question of protection to American industry. That convention said that they were in favor of building up America first and the rest of the world afterwards. It said Americans should be sent to the penitentiary. I was nominated I never heard a peep from England in favor of him. Whenever I hear of England wanting anything for us in a commercial way, that is always just what I don't want. I have always found England looking out for herself, and never looking out for anybody else. Look at the way she has treated Ireland, and driven her people to beggary. And it is because she has done that, that Irishmen when they come over here do not vote the way that England would like them to vote. I believe in protecting American industry. I favor a protective tariff because it enables us to pay our workmen more than they get anywhere else. But do you think that is robbing the people? I wonder if anybody is so hard-hearted as to believe that. The bounty on salt in one state made the industry grow. The tariff was soon put on and the bounty was repealed. The theory which they claim is that 50 cents a barrel was added to the cost. The bounty was in the day we commenced to manufacture salt instead of going up it went down. To-day you can buy a barrel of salt in the valley where I live for 50 cents what the farmer has been charged under the robbing process of our tariff. [Applause.] If we had never had that tariff we would never have had that competition and the price of salt would be way up. Take another industry. Take steel rails. Under the process of the tariff they have been steadily going down until to-day they are $32 a ton in the market. There is a similar good record for silk. The Republican party in the light of the past, has concluded that the best thing to do is to protect every industry in the United States. Next election President Cleveland will be elected. He already knows what they think up in Oregon. And I would build up not only Minnesota, but every state in this great country. Think of your mines, your great wealth. Think of what has been done for you here. Do you think the Lord would have built the state that way if he had supposed this was going to be a Democratic state? Your state was built up by nature's God, and it is not for you to do it. Do you think the Lord would have built the state that way if he had supposed this was going to be a Democratic state? Your state was built up by nature's God, and it is not for you to do it. Do you think the Lord would have built the state that way if he had supposed this was going to be a Democratic state? FIFTH CONGRESS.

RAILROAD EXEMPTIONS.

Arrest of a Number of Burlington Employees Charged with Conspiracy.

A number of bills were reported and placed on the calendar, including the bill for the dry-city appropriation bill. The bill to place John C. Fremont on the pensionable list was reported. The bill was taken up, and after considerable discussion, passed by a vote of yeas 21, nays 21. The conference report on the best office appropriation bill was received and on motion of Mr. Plumb the bill was referred to the committee on the judiciary. The bill was reported on the 21st of March.

HOUSE.

On motion of Mr. Crary, of Missouri, the senate bill was passed authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Arkansas river at Vannoy Landing, Ark.

The house then went into committee of the whole (Mr. Springer, of Illinois, in the chair) on the tariff bill, the internal revenue feature being pending.

Mr. Snowden, of North Carolina, offered an amendment repealing all internal taxes. He stated:

Mr. Snowden again offered his amendment repealing the tax on fruit spirits. After a long debate Mr. Snowden's amendment was rejected by a vote of 44 to 72. At the night session of the house a bill was passed which appropriates $3,000 to erect a new light-house on the coast of the United States at Wilmington, N. C. The bill was reported by Mr. Springer, of Illinois, in the chair.

There were two important amendments, one offered by Mr. Wise, of Virginia, repealing the tax on cigars, cheroots and cigarettes, and one by Mr. Springer, of Illinois, repealing the tax on spirits distilled from molasses and cane sugar.

Mr. Wise's amendment was defeated—43 to 78—and Mr. Snowden's was withdrawn.

Republican Comment.

A Magnificent Array.

When Hattie, Sherman, Dewey, Edmunds, and McKim, and others, will be in the latter part of the campaign, the country will be in a state of excitement, and as has never been surpassed in any canvass in the nation's history.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Thurman's Unlucky Number.

The Same Old Fraud.

The Democrats in the canvass of 1844 claimed that Polk, their candidate for president, was a better man than Clay, the whig nominee. Hundreds of thousands of people were deluded by this pretense, and thus Polk was elected. The house of representatives was chosen with Polk passed a resolution to the effect that the protective tariff of 1842, of course Polk signed it. This was a great mistake, and a great duplicity on the tariff question. It will be noticed, was practiced a generation or two ago as shamelessly as it is now done by the Democrats in the present canvass undoubtedly will claim that Cleveland is a better man than Harrison.

Absent from Gettysburg in 1862 and 1888.

President Cleveland didn't go to Gettysburg. Two lies. He didn't go in 1862, having exhausted his energy in finding a substitute. His absence on this anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg is a matter that doesn't matter. Remarks by the president on the immortal speech of Abraham Lincoln, which was a masterpiece of oratory, and a masterpiece of statesmanship.

The Democratic Woodchuck Hunt.

The explanation the boys gave for digging a hole in a woodchuck hole, that the hole was not a woodchuck hole, but a hole in a woodchuck hole, was a very good one. Parasitic Infection.

Among the most important diseases which we contract from the lower animals are those which are caused by parasites of various kinds. As these sometimes produce fatal results and as they are all more or less preventable I propose to restrict what I have to say to these diseases.

The Flesh of Diseased Animals.

It is held by many (even among those who are not vegetarians) that some serious diseases which now afflict the human family would be prevented if animal food were not part of human sustenance. It is urged that flesh derived from diseased animals finds its way freely into the human body, and that by its introduction diseases are introduced. The fact that the flesh of diseased animals does find its way into the market and on the table is beyond question. Our wise and discerning Jewish brethren have taught us this truth in an unmistakable form. They, in obedience to their ancient law, have all their animal food duly inspected. Their returns on the subject are worth recording. In 1878 out of 22,308 oxen killed in London no fewer than 7,885 were rejected; in 1879, out of 23,119 oxen, 6,133 were rejected; out of 3,330 calves 785 were rejected. Out of 41,556 sheep 13,019 were rejected. In the year 1879, in the course of 50 weeks, out of 81,000 calves, 6,133 were rejected; out of a total of 63,691 calves 1,826 were rejected; of 38,302 sheep 11,028 were rejected. In 1880, from July 25 to Dec. 25—25 weeks—out of 13,119 oxen 6,133 were rejected; out of calves numbering 1,964 as many as 634 were rejected; and out of 19,743 sheep 5,545 were refused for food because of the presence of trichinae.

Within the Century.

It is rather more likely than not that the old men of this period, those who came into the world with the present century, or a few years after, have seen more material progress than those of any preceding century in which the history was written or preserved. The first steam-vessel, christened the Savannah, which crossed the Atlantic Ocean, sailed from the port of Savannah on the 21st of Oct. 1819. The Savannah, a wooden sailing ship, was the first of the new ocean racers. The development of the uses of the power of steam alone is suggestive as to the progress of the century, but to it must be added the Jacquard loom, the magnetic telegraph, the cotton gin, the power loom, the sewing-machine, the printing press, the electric light, the electric motor and all those things which have made the modern world what it is.

Fights With Large Snakes.

Marion Earnest and Frank Hedge, two well-known citizens of Montpelier, Ind., shiver yet when they speak of their adventure. Early in the morning they shouldered their guns and started out gunning. While beating about a four-acre swamp they suddenly saw a large snake of the "blue racer" kind rushing toward them. He was about 10 feet long, and as he came on they saw his head and neck and saw his eyes darting round in various glances into their faces. A shudder ran through their bodies from head to foot. Both of them had had double-barrel shot-guns, but had no thought of these as they ran for dear life, until retreat was cut off by a high fence. Then Hedge turned, brought his gun to his shoulder and shot the snake, which was only a few yards away. It measured nearly seven feet in length, and had been stirred to such an unwonted display of courage by the fact that it had nothing to eat for a week or more.

How Calico Got Its Name.

The derivation of this word is very interesting as of this ancient date is its origin. Mrs. Leconte says in her "Travels in India," that in the year 1478, just ten months and two days after leaving the port at Lisbon, Vasco da Gama landed on the coast of Malabar at Calicut, or, more properly, Kala Koha. The city of the Black Goddies. Calicut was the name of the city, and it was not until a very recent date that it was an extensive territory, which, stretching along the western coast of southern India, reached from Bombay to Cochin. It was at an early period so famous for its weaving and dyeing of cotton cloth that its name became identified with the manufacture of the cloth. The name Calico is now generally admitted that this ingenious art originated in India in remote ages, and that from country found its way to Egypt, and thence to Europe, where it was introduced in the sixteenth century. The history of the development of the tapestry shows that here again we were not sufficiently careful of its existence within this body would be impossible. It is generally admitted that the history of the development of the tapestry shows that here again we were not sufficiently careful of its existence within this body would be impossible.

NOT A PLEASANT FELLOW.

Among the earliest known of human parasites the tapeworm occupies a distinguished place. Two of these animals evince their predilection for man as a habitation. Both of these species have heads and long segmented bodies, but the one is armed with either two or four suckers by means of which it fastens itself to its dwelling place and is with difficulty dislodged. The other is unarmed and is therefore more easily gotten rid of. The head of either of these varieties is the part from which the rest of the body is developed, and therefore, if the head is destroyed, the whole animal is destroyed. The head of the tapeworm is the part from which the rest of the body is developed, and therefore, if the head is destroyed, the whole animal is destroyed.

THE TRICHINA THE WORST.

But of all the parasites to which man is subject, the trichina is the worst and the most to be feared, for not only does it cause almost invariably the death of those so unfortunate as to be its subject, but it is a danger to the public health, and to a great extent impedes the progress of the flesh of the pig is the medium through which it enters the human system, and as the American people are so fond of pork, it is guarded by European governments as being above all others liable to be infected, they unite to exclude pork from their territories. How the trichina gets into the hog's organs is a long time a matter of great doubt, but the fact appears to be now pretty well established that the pig gets them from the trichinae which are found in the soil in which animal refuse is deposited. Where the rats get them is still unknown. Both in the rat and the hog the trichinae remain uninfected, but when they enter the flesh with a potential vitality which would never be called into the body of man. There they not only develop, but they at once become migratory and cause the most severe form of the body. When it is considered that a single drachm weight may contain 10,000 trichinae embryos, we may form some idea of the number of these creatures which are found in the lower animals are subject to other diseases to which man is liable. Among these are consumption, catarrh, apoplexy, inflammation of the brain and spinal cord, causing convulsions, tremor and paralysis.
